MSc Food Regulatory Affairs Distance Learning Academic Year 2010

This two year part-time, internet delivered programme is designed to provide training in Food Regulatory Affairs for suitably qualified graduates employed in the food sector who are unable to study full-time.

The course covers the regulation of the entire food chain.

The programme was developed by the Irish Universities Nutrition Alliance (IUNA) and is supported by international food companies, regulatory agencies, consumer organizations and international non-governmental organizations. European and global experts in science, law, economics, and policy contribute to the course.

Modules

- Introduction to the European Union and Food Regulatory Affairs
- Risk Analysis
- Farm to Fork Regulation of the Food Chain
- Research project
- International Food Regulatory Affairs
- Food and Health
- Current Issues in Food Regulatory Affairs
- Research Design and Statistics

Distance learning: The course is offered by the University of Ulster's online campus - Campus One in association with University College Dublin and University College Cork.

A Postgraduate Certificate and Postgraduate Diploma are offered as exit awards.
